On the Hunts Point Terminal Market

January 9, 2020

Many of the businesses that have facilities on the Hunts Point Terminal Market in the Bronx, NY, are multi-generational and have supplied retailers, foodservice operators and others for more than two centuries.

In 1967, some companies moved from the original Washington Market in Manhattan to what is now a 113-acre modernized distribution facility. Today, the market has more than 30 merchants that service ever-expanding regions. Directly and indirectly, the market employs approximately 10,000 people who help to provide every desired fruit and vegetable item to customers.
