Nature Fresh Farms will join YTV's Kid Food Nation: The Show to educate children on greenhouse growing and fresh vegetable production.

Nature Fresh Farms will be featured in an episode during the second season of Kid Food Nation: The Show, giving the cast and the viewers at home a peek inside greenhouse and packaging facilities while exploring the many processes it takes to grow, package, and ship fresh food. Hosts Spencer and Tyra interview members of the Nature Fresh Farms team as they answer questions and share their knowledge about all things inside the greenhouse.

Kid Food Nation: The Show is in partnership with Kid Food Nation and President's Choice Children's Charity. The series follows Spencer, Tyra and kid food nation heroes as they embark on culinary missions and answer questions like, "Should I eat crickets?" or "Are dandelions edible?" The eight-episode run for Season 2 will be fun, informative and inspirational to chefs both young and old.

Like the show, the Kid Food Nation project aims to encourage Canadian kids to explore food through online recipes, activities and videos. Founded by President's Choice Children's Charity, BGC Canada and Corus Entertainment, and now in its fifth year, the initiative celebrates a selection of junior chefs from every corner of Canada, featuring their family recipes in an annual contest and cookbook.

"Kid Food Nation is an amazing initiative that aligns completely with our vision of inspiring children and their families to learn about where their fresh fruits and vegetables come from while encouraging nutritional eating," said Marketing Director Stephanie Swatkov. "This was a great opportunity to share how we deliver fresh produce from seed to table in a fun interactive way that the program offers."

Committed to educating consumers and helping to build healthier communities, Nature Fresh Farms believes in cultivating healthy, life-long eating habits through education and teaching important food skills so families can continually develop a healthier relationship with food.

The second season of Kid Food Nation: The Show will premiere on YTV this summer on July 28 at 6:30 p.m. Each episode will also be uploaded on the Kid Food Nation YouTube channel.
