Bell Nursery named The Home Depot's 2022 Environmental Partner of the Year

November 23, 2022

Bell Nursery, an innovative wholesale nursery grower in the Central Garden & Pet portfolio, has been named Environmental Partner of the Year by The Home Depot. This award is presented to only one supplier a year that has gone above and beyond to assist the retailer in reducing the company's environmental footprint while delivering top-quality products to the consumers who rely on The Home Depot to help them beautify and improve their homes.

Bell Nursery has proudly supplied The Home Depot with live goods for over twenty-five years, and all Bell products are certified and sustainably grown to meet the highest standards of social environmental and economic standards.

Today, Bell provides multiple varieties of flowers, plants, and trees to The Home Depot stores across 18 states.

“Bell Nursery is thrilled to be recognized as The Home Depot’s 2022 Environmental Partner of the Year,” said Brett Guthrie, chief operating officer for Bell Nursery. “We know that The Home Depot is committed to running a responsible and sustainable company and that consumers depend on them to provide high-quality live goods for their homes and gardens. This is why Bell is committed to driving sustainability through our operations, working diligently to provide a safe and healthy work environment, supporting farm communities, and protecting vital environmental resources.”

Some highlights from The Home Depot and Bell Nursery partnership include:

- Utilizing 100 percent wind power at three facilities to significantly reduce CO2 consumption.
- Recycling 5.7 million pounds of cardboard and plastic through store and on-site programs.
- Implementing biological controls in Bell Nursery growing spaces.
- Leveraging drip irrigation in perennials farms, reducing 100,000,000 gallons in 2021.
- Over the last five years, Bell has sold 1.3 million trees through The Home Depot. When planted in an urban environment and allowed to grow for 10 years, these trees can sequester an estimated 77,000 metric tons of CO2.
- “Bell Nursery has been a valued partner of The Home Depot since 1995. In that time, they’ve experienced tremendous growth, yet their culture has remained consistent. They’ve always been on the leading edge of our suppliers, and they continue to be a model for environmental stewardship and sustainable horticulture. That’s something to be proud of,” said Dan Stuppiello, The Home Depot divisional merchandise manager for Live Goods.

Bell Nursery is a live goods leader within the $3.3 billion portfolio of Central Garden & Pet. The company’s Central Impact strategy outlines the company’s approach and dedication to driving sustainability across the enterprise.

In 2021, Bell Nursery was the recipient of The Home Depot Supplier of the Year Award.
