Publix VP to retire, successor named

After more than 47 years with Publix Super Markets, Charlotte Division Vice President Chuck Roskovich will retire March 31. With Roskovich's retirement, Joey Riddle has been promoted to take the role of Charlotte Division vice president.

Roskovich began his Publix career in 1975 as a part-time front service clerk in Lauderhill, FL. He transferred to the meat department in 1977 and was promoted to meat manager in 1984. In 1992, as meat manager, he had the privilege of being part of the management team that opened the company's first store in the Atlanta Division.

After spending 16 years in the meat department, he was promoted to store manager in 1993 and Atlanta Division district manager in 1995. He was promoted to Lakeland Division regional director in 2000 and Atlanta Division vice president in 2008 and joined the corporate support team as senior vice president of product business development in 2011. He returned to retail operations to start the Charlotte Division in 2013. Roskovich received the George W. Jenkins Award in 1993 for exemplifying leadership and perpetuating the company culture.

"Chuck has been an energetic and pioneering leader, having made significant contributions in four of our five divisions," said Publix President Kevin Murphy. "He has been responsible for growing and serving our diverse market area and leading the way for new market entry in the Atlanta and Charlotte divisions. In his 47 years, he has been committed to serving his customers by sharing our Publix brand and culture with the communities we serve. We are grateful for Chuck's leadership and wish him a happy retirement."

Roskovich and his wife, Cindy, are looking forward to spending more time with family, traveling and being on the track with his race cars.

Riddle began his Publix career in 1995 as a part-time front service clerk in St. Augustine, FL. After working in various retail positions, he was promoted to store manager in 2008 and district manager in the Charlotte Division in 2014. He was promoted to his current role, Charlotte Division regional director, in 2020. Riddle received the 2019 President's Award for perpetuating diversity and inclusion in the workplace.

"Joey is a dynamic leader who motivates and inspires his associates to achieve their personal best," said Murphy. "He took the opportunity to grow with Publix as we expanded into the Charlotte market and has been integral to establishing Publix as the premier grocer across the division. I am proud of what he has been able to accomplish so far and excited to see the contributions he will continue to make as we enter the Kentucky market, as well as in our existing operating area."

Riddle and his wife, Michelle, will relocate to Charlotte, NC.
