Eagle Eye opens new office, shop for logistics division

Newman Giles

Eagle Eye Produce, a leading grower, packer and distributor of a wide range of produce, including potatoes, onions, watermelons and mixed dry vegetables, expanded its logistics capabilities with a new 22,000-square-foot office and shop in Idaho Falls, ID, dedicated to its subsidiary, Eagle Eye Logistics.

This expansion includes the launch of a state-of-the-art facility, which features several bays for truck maintenance, modern offices for dispatch and management, and a fully equipped driver lounge designed to support the well-being of truck drivers.

This expansion is set to create new job opportunities, improve operational efficiencies and position the company for sustained growth.

"After decades in the produce industry, we've learned that managing everything from farm to fork is what sets us apart," said Newman Giles, CEO of Eagle Eye Produce. "This expansion is just another step in making that vision a reality."

Justin Clement, director of transportation at Eagle Eye Logistics, added, "It has been amazing to watch our growth from a small fleet to a nationwide carrier with over 100 trucks and drivers over the past 20 years. The new facility shows how focused we are to providing the best possible service and support for our drivers and customers, so they have everything they need to stay with us for the long haul."

The expansion is a significant step for Eagle Eye Produce as it continues to strengthen its position as a leader in the produce industry and reinforces the company's commitment to being the partner of choice for customers across North America.
