ALDI has customers shopping blind

June 19, 2026

Blind box culture has officially entered the grocery aisle. Inspired by the growing popularity of surprise unboxing trends across fashion, beauty and collectibles, ALDI is launching the “ALDI Blind Box,” a new way to turn everyday grocery shopping into something a little less predictable. For a limited time, shoppers have the chance to claim a free box filled with ALDI fan-favorite products, standout staples and fresh picks from across every aisle.

Ark Foods expands organic pepper program

June 19, 2026

Ark Foods is growing its organic program after a successful trial in Florida last fall, marking a new step forward for the specialty produce company as it builds out a broader organic offering for retail and foodservice customers.

Known for its focus on distinctive, high-flavor vegetables and specialty peppers, Ark Foods began testing organic production in Florida to evaluate quality, consistency and customer interest. The trial performed strongly, giving the company confidence to expand the program this summer with additional SKUs and new growing locations.

Cayuga County, where Jason Turek grows sweet corn and other vegetables, broke records for rainfall during the first five months of the year.

At mid-June, however, Turek was relieved when his farm, Turek Farms in King Ferry, received about an inch of rain. Starting in late May through mid-June, the county had been dry. Turek farms in upstate New York's Finger Lakes region, just east of Cayuga Lake, which historically receives enough rain that fields are not irrigated.

Trendspotting

WITH CRAIG LEVITT

Cheerios are Cheerios. Oreos are Oreos. No matter where you buy them, they are going to taste the same. We all know winning shoppers and shopper loyalty is cultivated in stores' fresh sections — especially the produce aisle. Just how important are these sections? Pretty darn important, according Logile Inc., a global leader in AI-powered Connected Workforce solutions.
